April 2020, the government of India asked TikTok to remove users posting misinformation related to the COVID-19 pandemic.[184] There were also multiple conspiracy theories that the government is involved with the spread of the pandemic.[185] As a response to this, TikTok launched a feature to report content for misinformation.[186] Content censorship and moderation by the platform Main article: Censorship on TikTok's censorship policy has been criticized as non-transparent.[187] Criticism of leaders such as Xi Jinping, Vladimir Putin, Donald Trump, Barack Obama, Mahatma Gandhi[188] and Recep Tayyip Erdoğan[189] has been suppressed by the platform, as well as information relating to the Xinjiang internment camps and the abuse of Uyghurs in the region. [190][191] Internal documents have revealed that moderators suppress posts created by users deemed "too ugly, poor, or disabled" for the platform, and censor political speech in livestreams. the Levant In October 2019, TikTok removed about two dozen accounts that were responsible for posting ISIS propaganda on the app.[202][203] User privacy concerns Privacy concerns have also been brought up regarding the app.[204][205] In its privacy policy, TikTok lists that it collects usage information, IP addresses, a user's mobile carrier, unique device access to user accounts using SMS.[209] In February, Reddit CEO Steve Huffman criticised the app, calling it "spyware," and stating "I look at that app as so fundamentally parasitic, that it's always listening, the fingerprinting technology they use is truly terrifying, and I could not bring myself to install an app like that on my phone."[210][211] Responding to Huffman's comments, TikTok stated, "These are baseless accusations made without a shred of evidence."[206] Wells Fargo banned the app from its devices due to privacy protections for children.[213][214] In June 2020, the European Data
